

Im very confused. As a 50 year old my lifetime as a voter has brought me to be accustomed to equal rights via the media regarding elections. An article I read in the Washington Post is informing me that a corporate group will be instructing stations to air biased reports (sounds like election advertising to the nth degree) against John Kerry? The Sinclair group.

I am questioning the legality of this in terms of election law. I don't see that these stations will allow rebuttal, and here is where my 50 year old history kicks in.....Have we become a nation that if you can buy up media outlets you ultimately can control one side of national, state, and local elections???

Can you address this question and inform me if the Sinclair group can implement its plan?....Can several corporate entities force passage of legislation favorable to their place in the media industry by exclusively electioneering for those candidate supportive of their positions???

I'm not sure if we can have the free elections our country has always had and wishes to maintain. I look forward to a response and plan to send copies of this inquiry to my representatives.
